One night in February Beata was (be) up late on the computer. She tried (try) to finish her History project when she received (receive) an instant message from a guy she didn't know. He claimed (claim) that Beata met (meet) him at a party. She didn't remember (not remember) that. But he was the funniest person she ever/encountered (ever/encounter) on the Net, so she joined (join) him. They talked (talk) for two hours and at the end, he exchanged (exchange) their phone numbers. At that time Beata lived (live) in Warsaw with her parents and Peter studied (study) in Gdańsk. They only/knew (only/know) each other for two weeks when he invited (invite) her to spend the weekend at the seaside. Beata knew (know) Gdańsk quite well because she had gone (go) on holiday there every summer when she was younger. When her train arrived (arrive) at the station, Peter waited (wait) for her with a big bunch of red roses. Beata's first impressions were that he wasn't what she looked (look) for at all. But by Sunday evening she found (find) him (bump) into Mr Right on the Internet. From then on, they spoke (speak) on the phone Skype every day. Only three months passed (pass) before Beata decided (decide) to move to Gdańsk and start studying there. She can't believe now she was (be) (think) that Internet dating was only for weirdos and desperate, lonely people!
