- RP: Can you tell us how you became involved in lie 1 _____?
- MJ: Well, before I started working for the police, I'd studied business and psychology at university. On my course we studied ^a body language. I ² _____ it fascinating, especially the way people behave when they're trying to hide something or tell a lie.
- RP: So, how exactly can you tell if someone is lying?
- MJ: First, you need to watch the face. A fake smile is the first sign that something isn't right. It means somebody is trying to ^b hide a real feeling. It's easy to do a fake smile – you just turn the sides of your mouth up. But a real smile changes a person's whole face – the eyes light up and the cheeks and eyebrows rise. And ³ _____ lines appear around the eyes.
- RP: I've heard that if someone is lying, they can't ⁴ _____ at you directly in your eyes? Is that true?
- MJ: No, that's not true – in fact, if someone is lying, they often stare a little bit too ⁵ _____ in your eyes. (...)
- RP: So the eyes can give you a lot of information.
- MJ: Yes, indeed. The eyes can ⁶ _____ you a lot. But there are other signs that ^c indicate that a person is lying: crossed arms, for example, or a hand in front of the mouth. (...) And then there are the things people say.
- RP: Right – so what sort of things do people say when they're lying?
- MJ: Well, they sometimes give too much information. A typical example is the suspect ⁷ _____ tells you that he had been at home all evening, and then tells you ^d in detail what he'd watched on television, who he had been with, exactly what time he'd gone to bed, and so on. It's unnatural to give so much detail, and I would be ^e suspicious.
